Alma was known for her sweet nature and her love for the outdoors. She found solace and joy in activities such as camping, fishing, and gardening. Her green thumb was evident in her knack for growing roses and all sorts of flowers, which brought beauty to her surroundings.

Alma's love for nature extended to her enjoyment of simply being outside, where she felt most at peace. However, her greatest joy came from spending time with her family. She cherished every moment with her children, grandchildren, and great-grandson, creating lasting memories filled with love and laughter.

Alma's kindness, love, and passion for life will be deeply missed by all who had the privilege of knowing her. Her legacy of warmth and affection will continue to live on in the hearts of those she touched.
