“ My friendship with Sandy brought some adventures with Chris. He went with us a few times when we went out running around. I always called him my 'first baby' because as an only child, I'd never really taken care of a baby before. I remember one night I was watching him and he kept crying. I kept feeding him! I'd try and play with him and he'd still cry. I finally took him to my house because I knew my mom would know what to do. The poor baby needed his diaper changed! That's all he wanted!

As an adult, Chris always recognized me and always spoke, even though once I didn't recognize him. He said, "I'm Chris." No further explanation needed. I guess I embarrassed him because I threw my arms around him and yelled, "My first baby!" (He really loved it, I could tell!) But before that day was over, he helped someone whose car in the parking lot was flat and he changed the tire, even wearing good clothes - just to help someone in need.

Even in November when I went by their house and he was sick, he still came and got his hug even as bad as he was feeling then.

Rest in peace, Chris. You will be greatly missed. You were greatly loved. You suffered terribly but your pain is over now.

Prayers for the comfort of your mom, daughter, sister, nephews, and grandparents. You are like family to me and always will be.

Nita
