“ It's taken me a couple days to navigate through all my feelings to finally get to a place I can post this.

On Tuesday I lost one of my dearest friends. I called her Dinah Doo. I met her in Florida over 20 years ago. We became more than friends. She was family. I loved her so much. We haven't seen each other since I moved permanently to Tennessee but we communicated often. She was funny, loving, bossy as all get out, truthful and a real friend. We were together often, we've been through some stuff together. We've spent countless hours talking about everything.

I'm going to miss her snarky remarks when i complain about being cold. For every negative she always had a positive. She kept me level in my thinking about life. She helped me through the difficult times with Faith's dad.

We had hundreds of lunch dates. In our early years I sang songs to her through a karaoke Mike. Her smile was beautiful and infectious. She thought and told me I was beautiful and because of her I believed I was.

Everytime we were together we hung onto each other like we would never be together again. Her hugs were country and warm. We never left a conversation without an I love you. She kissed my cheeks and I kissed hers.

It sucks grieving alone. My heart is broken 💔 because I never got to tell her goodbye.

She was very quiet and private about these last days and her journey. That's just how she was. I love you Dinah Berry ❤️ you are one of very few on this earth that knew me inside and out.

I would be there tomorrow if I could but you know my story. I'll see you again my beautiful radiant friend. I'll kiss your cheeks again and I'll sing a beautiful song in your ear.

My friend. My family. Forever

Love Deb
