“ I am so sorry for your loss of a true rock of a man. I worked with Earl for many years and he was a natural craftsman, something you just can't find anymore. Earl loved his family so much and they were always part of his conversation. Earl always stood for what he believed in and was never a slacker in any phase of his life. He taught this to his students and I am sure there are many men able to earn a living and care for their family to this day because of Earl Harris. I very much respected Earl and always followed what was happening with you, Nancy, he never said an unkind thing about you. Of course, my girls were always friends with Margrets children, Brynn and Kaelyn. My heart goes out to you. I can truly say that many will miss a man like Earl and his contributions to lives of his students, to a once great trade school, and many things that went unrecognized in the City of London. Lay with the angels, Earl. Tody Murphy Coffey
